Fishing In GTA V No Guide SOUTH BEND, Ind. - HEAD Coach Tom Allen had heard the rumors about there being a video game about football with Notre Dame. Well he's seen the game now. "It's awesome," Allen said. And it was. And it was awesome for two reasons. The first part of it for Notre Dame? "It was very authentic," Allen said. "It's realistic. I felt like we had a game." I'm sure the second part of it was awesome as well. It's hard to get to that point. First, for the reality of it. We have one of the last of our coaches be in real, in-person contact with a player that we have recruited, then become a student at Notre Dame. When that happens in real life, the staff remembers it. That's not just saying we remember the player, that's saying we remember the moment it happens. We remember where we were standing. We remember that the player's face would light up. We remember the moment. When Rockstar Games released Grand Theft Auto V, I thought I'd find out what the game was like, what the people were like and, well, see the whole thing. I saw the whole thing. It was awesome. And to be honest, I saw the whole thing in real life. I'll just state that so as not to misinterpret my own opinion. And again, it was awesome for two reasons. The first part of it for Notre Dame? "It was very authentic," Allen said. "It's realistic. I felt like we had a game." The second part of it? That. That. It was almost like I was part of it. I was part of it. It was reality. "I felt like I was there," Allen said. "I felt like I was part of it." That's the way I feel about it, too. It was like I was there. You feel what I'm saying? I was there. I was there. I was there. It was the greatest feeling. The greatest feeling. It was unreal. It's the greatest feeling. Forget anything else. It was the greatest feeling.

Daily Archives: August 3, 2016 The South Korean government has decided to remove the Tesla Gigafactory from the balance of the province's special economic zone (SEZ) license, effectively killing the project. As we previously reported, South Korea has now issued several licenses to Tesla to build a $5 billion plant in the Autonomous Region of Gyeongsangbuk-do where many automotive plants and factories are located. And according to the Korea JoongAng Daily, that SEZ license was revoked in mid-August. "The reason for the cancellation is that Tesla has dropped out of the project," an official at the South Gyeongsang provincial government said. When Tesla applied for the project and requested an exemption on production facilities from the local authorities, the company had already signed a cooperation agreement with the Gyeonggi-do government - a deal under which the company received a one-time grant of some $4 billion - so the South Korean government was able to amend the license to exclude Tesla. The decision was made to comply with the agreement with Gyeonggi-do and to ensure that the project would continue as planned. Tesla said that it is working on the first phase of the factory, building battery packs and the factory facility, where it will produce 35 GWh of battery packs a year. The South Korean government said that now Tesla will have to pay back the grant - estimated to be around $4 billion - and will have to negotiate with other parties to complete the project. * u ( o ) - 4 * s ( o ) .
